AN EXCITING LAUNCH

Located on the iconic Kensington Church Street and situated on the site of the former Kensington Palace Barracks, Lancer Square is being transformed into 36 residences, with access to an outstanding suite of amenities including a 25-metre swimming pool, spa, state-of-the-art gym, secure underground parking and a 24-hour dedicated concierge service. Topping out of the building took place in September 2019 and the first residents are expected to move in from early 2021.

Kevin KLUK, CEO of Belworth Developments comments, "The development's Kensington Church Street location and its history as the former site of Kensington Palace Barracks are truly one-of-a-kind. We have collaborated with expert partners on the construction, design and project management of the building to create a new landmark which we hope will form an important part of Kensington's legacy. We look forward to welcoming residents to Lancer Square, each of whom will have the rare and privileged opportunity to live on the doorstep of Kensington Palace."

Transforming spaces

Jutta Hoehn is the creative mind behind JSH Algarve, the innovative architectural studio leading the way in bespoke design across Portugal. Jutta specialises in developing one-of-a-kind homes and successfully blends contemporary architecture with traditional features to create a signature aesthetic.

As part of her portfolio of elite properties, Jutta is channelling her skill and eye for detail into transforming three townhouses in Faro, two of which are due for completion in May 2020. Although modern, these townhouses possess the charm of much older properties with the use of Portuguese tiles in the kitchen along with antique entrance doors with glass panels, proving that classic architecture can be seamlessly combined with contemporary design.
